- The Rochester Cathedral is the second oldest Cathedral in England and inside, there were 4 big green men faces above the organ. These « green men » represented « mother nature ».
- The Minor Canon Row was a street composed of 7 identical houses and there were the shutters inside of these for keeping the heat in the house.
- When we went to the families, we were welcomed by the 2 girls and the husband, their children, the couple who has the house, and they have also a dog. Before eating, we have settled in, we ate pasta Bolognese with cooked vegetables and ice cream but we did not eat with the family. After eating, we took our shower and went to bed
- To conclude, this first day was a little bit long but it was very interesting and I discovered a lot of things.

- The most important cultural aspect was the Christ Church College in Oxford because this college is one of the most famous in the world, also, a part of Harry Potter movie was filmed there. The cafeteria of Christ Church has inspired the movie Harry Potter. It's very hard to be accepted at Oxford University because it's very expensive and you need excellent grades. Since Oxford is a city with a large number of students there are a lot of libraries like the Bodleian library. It was built in 1602. We visited the Christ Church Cathedral too.
- The most interesting activity was the shopping because we had two opportunities to buy what we wanted. The first time was during the lunch break and the second time in the late afternoon. I did my shopping at the “Westgate” mall.
- The evening with the family was “so-so” and long because we had uncooked pasta Bolognese and the beds were not very comfortable. However, the house was big and cute. We had to wake-up at seven o'clock and take the breakfast and we could have toasts or cereals.
- To conclude, the day was very interesting and cool.

- In London we visited the Natural History Museum which was the most informative activity because I discovered many new things. We could see dinosaur bones, insects and wild animals. There are also many gems and a room entirely reserved for the moon exhibition, where we can see it.
- In this city, the most original cultural aspect was Buckingham Palace, built for John Sheffield in 1703. It is the official residence of the Queen and events connected with the royal family take place here. When the royal family flag is on the top of the palace the Queen is in and when the Union Jack flag is on the top of the palace the Queen is absent.

- During our visit in London we went to Parliament Square, a London town square in the City of Westminster. The Westminster palace dates from 1097 but because of a fire in 1834 it had to be rebuilt. In this palace there are 3 towers like the one of Victoria which is 1100 meters high and which is the highest of the palace or the Elisabeth tower which houses the Big Ben, the most famous clock of the United Kingdom and which rings since 1859.
- The most interesting activity was The London Eye because it's the easiest to see the whole city. London Eye was bought by Coca Cola and the first name of this attraction was « The Millenium Wheel » because it was created in the year 2000.
- The evening with the family was nice because wa ate pizza with chips.
- To conclude, this day was very informative and I learned a lot of new things.

- The most original cultural aspect was the Royal Pavilion because it was a royal residence and it was for George IV. The pavilion has an Anglo - Indian style (it was very popular at the time).
- The most interesting activity was visiting the streets of Brighton because they are beautiful and original. There are many graffiti on the walls and many artists painted different scenes so the result is amazing.
- Then, the evening and the morning with the family was fun but a little bit boring because the house was cool and cute but she didn't speak a lot and the food was very good ( we ate pasta and pizza...) and my friend and I didn't sleep in the same room.
- To conclude the trip was just perfect, the place was beautiful. It was very cool to go on a trip with my friends and I think it was a big experience for us. Now I want to go again to England with my friends.
